Κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκοντες.

IT WAS known some time before the first of January that a new year was about to make its appearance, but it was not until that day that the stranger was actually introduced. Of this good and memorable year, 1875, certain magical books burnt in the Alexandrian library, contained many strange predictions and high promises. From other records also, it appears, in particular, that an earnest quest, if not for the Holy Grail, at least with a very high ideal, should close, and that the order, with numbers reduced and some of its high hopes unrealized, should celebrate its commencement of practical life.

But, leaving mystic prophecies, it may be said that over the Graduating Class hangs an inevitable fate—change. "When I am gone"—said Macaulay in a speech, and then his voice faltered and broke, for the word gone is not a pleasant one to link with a man's own name. To have an Aladdin's palace stolen suddenly away, to be rudely awakened from a DeQuincey's luxurious dream is not pleasurable; and, in like manner, to exchange the romance of college days for realities, can be viewed only as the shivering bather views his first plunge—to be done because it must be, rather than from any pleasure in it. But a distinction is necessary. When Bruce stood at the fountain head of the Nile, it is said, having accomplished what had been the ambition of kings and warriors, conquerors and travelers ever since the time of Ptolemy, a feeling of regret came over him and he became a victim of sentimental ennui. Not such is our regret. On the contrary, the alumni-to-be have yet histories to write, monuments to build, worlds to conquer. And '75 will write and build and conquer.

THERE seems to be in our institution a growing tendency to conservatism which should be fostered. Not only has the chapel-stage been the frequent exponent of conservative sentiments, but in the college at large there is evidence of their influence. We can never sufficiently deprecate the importation of opinions which may prove fatal to our individuality. During underclassman years we felt and saw but little enthusiasm in the college. Few appreciated her peculiar advantages, too many left the hill with only bitter memories of their Alma Mater. At last we can see signs of refreshment in more senses than one, and with our awakening loyalty comes the conservative feeling. Proud of Hamilton's ancient name and record, sensible of the honor of being enrolled among her sons, we would discourage anything that may tend to efface the ancient landmarks or destroy the prestige of the college as the especial home of a purely literary culture. Gladly we welcome the opportunity of competition with our sister colleges, of showing how well and bravely we can hold our own in any race. Junior year brings with it an increasing sense of the value of the college course. It is often the case that the necessity of diligent application, and not to text-books only, is too little appreciated during the previous years. Could we but begin the course again with our present sense of its importance, how much greater might be our attainment. The old curriculum, as we find it hardened by the feet of predecessors, is in itself both an incentive and an inspiration. As we of '76 approach the day of graduation it is with increasing pleasure in our class associations. As time progresses may these ties strengthen and, by a closer union, may our capability for better and more effective action be increased. It shall be our aim, as heretofore to make our influence felt for the advancement of the college.

WHICH WAY IS THE RESULTANT?

GENTLE READER, '77 bows before you in humble greeting. Beautiful similes and flowing figures we cannot entertain you with. Our fingers are untutored to the pen and far more accustomed to the rites of infant baptism and the wild launch of the lasooed Indian club than the weaving of rhetorical flourishes.

A Sophomore! Ferocious peruser, what idea does that word call up to your mind? To the anxious pater familias it is a gowned and slippered figure bending over analytical geometry. To the body of students it is the wretch that comes on the hill in the small hours of the morning and disturbs the slumbers of the righteous by grappling with imaginary stair-cases in the dark. To the Fresh. it is—(keep quiet, bub! don't scream.) Still, however, in spite of these contradictory impressions, a Sophomore is an indispensable member of a college. The Freshman comes on the hill foolish, vain and unmannerly. In a few short weeks, by the agency of the Sophomore, he is completely changed. His foolishness and vanity disappear with the acquirement of civility. He is taught, not the studied forms of conventional politeness, but rather the impromptu courtesy of a man of parts. You may invade his room at the dead hour of night. You may entice him from his little trundle-bed by his hair. Yet even then, thus roused from his slumbers, he will show forth all his teachings. With a soul above the vanities of dress he entertains his unexpected guests. Music, elocution and the mazy dance are invoked for their pleasure till it pleases the callers to lay the subject on the table and adjourn. Put report and work together and impartially judge for thyself, O reader, of the work of Sophomore year.

LOOKING hopefully forward to a happy and successful college life the men of '78 send a hearty greeting to the friends of "Old Hamilton." We cannot say that we came to college without any of the historic dread of the Sophs. Oh, no! We had just enough dread to be agreeably disappointed at the humane treatment which we received at their hands. Why should we complain? Vigorous exercise and cleanly state of the person are universally recommended as requisite to perfect health. We never knew of any virtue in bathing, at all hours, with the clothes on; but we accepted it as a principle, and made a disinterested practice of it. As for exercise we have given good proof that it agrees with us; and we have reason for thinking that the "typical Soph." needs much more of it than we.

With great gallantry we serenaded our neighbors of the Seminaries. Men of experience claim that a serenade is not a serenade when administered with fish horns. However that may be, yet we know the romance is not increased in the least degree by the sudden appearance of the sturdy watch; and we plainly showed at that juncture that we were well acquainted with "the better part of valor."

The pleasures of the first year at college become more real every day. Our studies are interesting and we have entered upon them with great relish. When perplexed by a knotty problem or some obscure passage, we enjoy the pleasure of a conqueror, in mastering all the difficulties. A good beginning, it is said, is half the task accomplished. We are willing to test our fortunes by this principle; and, in the trial, we find great assurance of success.

Society for Preservation of Property:

Gentlemen—When an organization confers a blessing upon mankind, it should receive a due meed of praise from all cognizant of the fact. During our "First Term Fresh." we were afflicted with a loss of memory, the effect of which was, that we left "watches," "books," and "gloves" in all sorts of places. A few doses of your infallible remedy has effected a complete cure. We are led to this commendation through a sense of justice to you.

S. L. B. and Many Members of '78.

 Your Great Mnemonic remedy has not been equaled since the days of Sparta. God bless you for the good you have done and are doing to an afflicted humanity.

ACROSTIC.

"Lathrop's is the place, boys, for all who want to smoke
And pass a pleasant hour or two, (Eugene will stand a joke.)
'Tis the only restaurant in town and every thing's in order,
How he does it is a marvel, but he keeps a well-stocked larder,
Real Imported Cigars in stock, of every favorite brand;
Oysters served in every style and always kept on hand;
Poor people fed for nothing (?) and the rich at moderate rates.
Soft soap—those fed in charity don't get much on their plates."

To Book Buyers.

Your attention is called to our excellent facilities for supplying

Classical Text, Common School — AND —

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS,

of every description, promptly, and on very reasonable terms.

We send an order every evening to New York for Books, and receive a bundle of them by express every afternoon—so that we fill orders for any Books not to be had in Utica, within 48 hours, and without additional cost.

An experienced man in New York attends to our orders, and goes to the various Publishers and Importers, or to dealers in Second Hand or Rare Books, as the case may be, and makes cash purchases for us. The same person procures from Boston and Philadelphia, any books that he can not get in New York, so that our customers have the three greatest Book Marts in the country at their disposal.

We mail books postpaid to any part of the United States. All Subscription Books sold at the regular prices.

We keep constantly on hand a large and choice assortment of Books, including History, Biography, the Sciences, the best works of Fiction, all the Popular School Books, &c., &c.

A Complete Line of Stationery

FOR OFFICE AND GENERAL USE.

☞ Subscriptions received for any Magazine or Periodical—American or Foreign—and mailed to any address, or delivered by Carrier Boys to City Subscribers.
